The world depends on aviation for global trade, tourism, freight and the millions of jobs it creates. Before COVID19- ground aviation to a halt, the sector was making an incredible impact on the way we lived, worked and travelled: 4.5 billion passengers; 23,000 passenger aircraft; 10 million people working directly in aviation and 65 million jobs supported by the industry as a whole; 120,000 daily flights; 3,750 airports and an impressive US$2.85 trillion economic impact.

Worldwide annual air passenger numbers have doubled every 15 years since the late 1970s and were projected to hit 10 billion by 2040 with 1,234 new commercial aircraft delivered in 2019 alone. Aviation's direct impact on economic progress cannot be understated and nowhere is that more evident than in the GCC where regional governments have strongly supported airport development, airline expansion and aviation innovation for decades.

As nations around the world begin to rebuild their economies from the devastating impact of COVID19-, aviation will once again play a major role in connecting businesses, providing essential supply routes and bringing us all closer to one another again. In Dubai, we are proud to claim that one out of every 20 COVID-19 vaccine doses administered around the world has transited through Dubai and flown on an Emirates aircraft. The UAE has been a leading international champion of aviation, with its airports and airlines winning numerous accolades over the years. With over 1 billion doses of COVID19- vaccines already administered globally, there is still a long way to go and an important role for the aviation industry to play in restoring our lives to the way we were used to.

Airport Show 2021 takes place with the worst year in aviation history behind us and innovation and collaboration more critical than ever before. With thousands of aviation the show is well positioned to help the industry restart those important conversations it missed over the last eighteen months and build new opportunities to support global recovery efforts. We are pleased to invite you to return with us to fruitful and prosperous trade exhibitions, bringing our customers together again to get business growing. We look forward to welcoming you to a safe and rewarding Airport Show 2021.
